SURVEY TERM DEFINITIONS

Content Marketing: A strategic marketing approach focused on creating and distributing valuable, relevant, and consistent content to attract and retain a clearly defined audience—and, ultimately, to drive profitable customer action.

Success: Achieving your organization’s desired/targeted results.

CHART TERM DEFINITIONS

All Respondents: B2B content marketers, all of whom indicated their organization has used content marketing for at least one year.

Most Successful (aka Top Performers) and Least Successful: The “most successful” are those who characterize their organization’s overall content marketing approach as extremely or very successful (Top 2). The “least successful” characterize their organization’s approach as minimally or not at all successful (Bottom 2). See Page 10.
Welcome to the 11th Annual B2B Content Marketing Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends report. You may notice this year’s report feels different than past years and that’s by design. A year like no other required an approach like no other.

As in past years, we fielded the survey during the summer. We asked many of the same questions as last year but added new ones to see how content marketers were faring several months into the pandemic.

Although the data did not reveal drastic reductions in content marketing resources, many respondents shared in the fill-in comments their challenges of having to do more with less. Others shared their concerns about trying to reach audiences in an overcrowded virtual world.

Nevertheless, one thing stood out: Content marketers are resilient. Most have met the challenges of the pandemic head-on: They’re adapting quickly—and they believe in the value their content provides.
B2B Content Marketing Top Performers At A Glance

For many of the questions this year, we did not observe large gaps between all respondents and the most successful. Areas where we observed a gap of at least 10 percentage points are shown here.

PANDEMIC RESPONSE & CONTENT MARKETING SUCCESS
When COVID-19 began to spread, marketers made quick adjustments to their content marketing strategy. At the time of the survey, many had responded swiftly by changing their messaging strategy and adjusting their editorial calendars; however, far fewer had begun to study how the pandemic influenced the customer journey—or how it affected personas. Even fewer had adjusted their content marketing key performance indicators (KPIs) or metrics—important steps for analyzing whether changes being made are effective.

Even so, when we asked respondents to look back over the last 12 months as a whole, 31% said their organization had been extremely/very successful with content marketing. It will be interesting to see how marketers report next year on the pandemic’s broader impacts on their success, considering we were only four months into a “stay-at-home” world at the time of the survey.

“WE ARE CHALLENGED WITH KEEPING TRACK OF HOW COVID-19 IMPACTED THE BUYER JOURNEY AND HOW WE NEED TO CREATE CONTENT TO ADDRESS THOSE POINTS OF FRICTION AND GET PEOPLE ACROSS THE FINISH LINE.”

Survey Respondent
11th Annual Content Marketing Survey
79% of B2B marketers reported their organization has a content marketing strategy. Of those, 70% made major or moderate adjustments to their strategy due to the pandemic. 22% view those adjustments as short-term and 66% view them as both short- and long-term.

TEAM
STRUCTURE &
OUTSOURCING
The majority of respondents reported the size of their content marketing team had stayed the same compared with 12 months ago, while another one-third said it had increased. Large companies were slightly more likely to report a decrease.

In the survey fill-in comments, many reported having more work for the same sized team or trying to do more with less due to layoffs and spending freezes. As one respondent said, “Bandwidth is a challenge, as is trying to continue to grow the content marketing function when hiring has slowed.”

Thirty-two percent of respondents indicated their content marketing team ranges in size from two to five employees; however, 35% said they don’t have a person dedicated full time to content marketing (not surprisingly, this was more prevalent among small companies).

The percentage reporting their organization outsources at least one content marketing activity didn’t change much this year. The exception was for large companies with 1,000+ employees (71% last year vs. 61% this year).

Those who outsource said their top challenges are finding partners with adequate topic expertise (69%), budget issues (51%), and finding partners who understand/are able to empathize with their audience (43%).

“OUR COMPANY NEEDS MORE CONTENT. WE SERVE A DEEP NICHE AND FEW PEOPLE UNDERSTAND OUR INDUSTRY WELL ENOUGH TO POP IN AND DO SMALL PROJECTS FOR US.”

Survey Respondent
11th Annual Content Marketing Survey
The majority of respondents (57%) reported the size of their content marketing team was the same as 12 months ago and 31% said it had increased. Large companies saw more change overall in the size of their teams, with 38% (vs. 31%) reporting an increase and 17% (vs. 12%) reporting a decrease in team size.

11th Annual Content Marketing Survey: Content Marketing Institute/MarketingProfs, July 2020
CONTENT CREATION & DISTRIBUTION
We saw an increase in those whose organizations use content creation/collaboration/workflow technologies (58% this year vs. 48% last year)—not surprising in a work-from-home world.

Beyond the broader technologies, we asked marketers what tools they/their teams use while creating content: keyword research tools (78%) and editorial calendars (70%) topped the list. Surprisingly, only 22% indicated they use fact-checking procedures/tools, revealing an important step missing for those striving to build trust/credibility with their audiences.

Regarding the content types they use, blog posts/short articles topped the list. Obviously, marketers reported a decrease in the use of in-person events over the last 12 months (42% from 73%), while the use of virtual events/webinars/online courses increased to 67% from 57%.

Because online communities present a good way to attract audiences and build relationships, a new question on the survey asked marketers if their organization had established one: 32% said yes. Among those who have not, 27% said they are likely to within the next 12 months, while another 48% said they are unlikely to.

The top ways marketers distribute content organically are social media platforms (89%), email (87%), and their organization’s website/blog (86%). And while 54% are speaking/presenting at virtual events, only 38% are writing guest posts for other publications (and even fewer are doing guest spots, working on media/influencer relations, or participating in collaborative social spaces)—perhaps indicating missed opportunities to reach broader audiences.

As for paid content distribution, the use of social media advertising/promoted posts increased to 83% from 60% last year, with low-cost opportunities likely being a factor. LinkedIn is the most often used B2B social media platform, both for organic and paid distribution.

Respondents rated paid social media advertising as the second highest-performing paid method they use to distribute content (second to SEM/pay-per-click). However, more paid content can also present more competition. According to one respondent, “Share of attention is harder each day with so many companies pushing low-value content through paid channels.”

“CLIENTS ARE GETTING BOMBARDED WITH ELECTRONIC INFORMATION—ESPECIALLY NOW SINCE IN-PERSON MEETINGS AND EVENTS ARE ON HOLD. HOW DO WE CREATE COMPELLING CONTENT THAT GETS DISTRIBUTED IN A WAY THAT STANDS OUT FROM THE CLUTTER?”

The biggest changes this year:
- Use of in-person events decreased to 42% from 73%.
- Use of virtual events/webinars/online courses increased to 67% from 57%.
- Use of livestreaming content increased to 29% from 10%.

Of all the content types they use, B2B marketers said blog posts/short articles and virtual events/webinars/online courses (both tied at 22%) produced the best overall content marketing results for their organization in the last 12 months.

Other content types used in last 12 months: Digital Magazines (16%); Print Magazines (11%); Print Books (5%); and Other (5%).
32% of B2B marketers said their organization has established an online community. Among those who have not, 27% say they are likely to within the next 12 months, while another 48% say they are unlikely.
The top three organic content distribution channels B2B marketers use are social media platforms (89%), email (87%), and their organization’s website/blog (86%).

These percentages are similar to last year, with two notable exceptions:

- Use of guest posts/articles in third-party publications decreased to 38% from 48%.

METRICS & GOALS
Most respondents said their organization used metrics to track content performance in the last 12 months (81%). Of those, website traffic is used most often (90%).

“One of our challenges is determining what content is most likely to lead to actual business,” said one respondent. “We get a lot of interest in reading our content, but we’re working to determine what to focus on to gain qualified/ready buyers.”

Regarding their goals for content marketing, 87% said they have used it successfully in the last 12 months to create brand awareness. As the chart on Page 35 shows, marketers have steadily been increasing the attainment of numerous content marketing goals over the last three years; however, we observed a decrease this year in those using it to nurture subscribers/audiences/leads.

“We’re challenged with directly relating/tying the impact of content marketing to our company’s bottom line, i.e., explicitly showing content marketing as a revenue-generating activity.”

11th Annual Content Marketing Survey: Content Marketing Institute/MarketingProfs, July 2020
More than two-thirds of respondents went into 2020 armed with a content marketing budget. The timing of the survey (July) made it an ideal time to ask respondents how their H1 2020 content marketing spending was impacted by the pandemic: 53% reported it had stayed the same. Another 29% reported a decrease and 18% reported an increase. A closer look at these figures based on company size revealed little difference.

We then asked respondents to estimate how their spending would look during Q3 2020 and Q4 2020, as well as how H2 would compare with H1. Nearly one-third thought their organization would spend more on content marketing in H2 than H1. The majority, however, expected spending to stay flat for the rest of 2020. Only 12% expected a decrease.

Only time will tell whether content marketing budgets and spending stay flat in 2021. Some respondents in the fill-in comments said they would continue to invest heavily in content marketing. Some of these marketers shared they are part of start-up operations, for whom content/SEO is especially important. Other marketers said their biggest challenge in 2021 would be looming budget cuts depending on where the economy heads.

“Given COVID-19 and its effects on the economy and our budgets, it will be a challenge to hold onto the growth and gains we’ve made with our content marketing over the last few years. It will depend on whether our budgets can grow a bit again in 2021 or if we lose even more budget. We have found ways to work lean, but at some point we’ll have to start investing again to have good results.”

*Note: The question read: “Prior to the pandemic, approximately how much had your organization budgeted for 2020 content marketing (not including salaries), in U.S. dollars?”

11th Annual Content Marketing Survey: Content Marketing Institute/MarketingProfs, July 2020*
53% of B2B marketers indicated there was no change in their content marketing spending in H1 2020 in response to the pandemic. Another 29% reported a decrease in spending, and 18% reported an increase. These percentages did not vary much by company size.
Nearly one-third of respondents estimated their organization would spend more on content marketing during the second half of 2020 than the first half. The majority, however, expected spending to stay flat for the rest of 2020.

INSIGHTS FOR 2021
At the time of the survey, 50% of respondents thought the pandemic would have a moderate long-term impact on their organization’s content marketing success. Only 15% felt it would be major. It will be interesting to see if this outlook changes in the months to come.

Looking toward 2021, we asked respondents to select the top five content marketing-related areas they thought their organization would invest in during 2021. Content creation (70%) and website enhancements (66%) topped the list.

“We’ll be looking to increase staff and ramp up our inbound strategy through content marketing,” said one respondent. Another said their organization will be “tracking results and continuing to expand our content marketing efforts as our company continues to grow.”

“We have to focus on acquiring customers while also being sensitive to their issues…we can’t be tone deaf with marketing in times of great change and crisis. We have to support people before the business. Without people, we don’t have business.”

ACTION STEPS FOR MOVING FORWARD

By Robert Rose, Chief Strategy Advisor, CMI

Stop Waiting For The New Normal—We’re Already In It
We’ve spent so much time in 2020 struggling for an answer to “what now,” that it can seem impossible to plan for 2021. We wonder what the “new normal” will be. Spoiler alert: No one knows.

What can you do, then? Well, we mistakenly believe that “what now” means we should use our experience in all that we’ve been going through to try to predict the new normal future. We believe our experience helps us to see around corners.

Instead, start planning with a self-assessment of your content marketing plan. Remember that answering “what now” is not trying to plan for “what’s next.” Look at all the things that evolved this year that you want to keep, change, or stop doing. Then ask yourself how you might want to change to prepare for whatever comes next.

Content Marketing Is Cool—but Content Operations Make It Work
As 2021 emerges, we’re seeing more businesses begin to in-source many elements of content creation, production, and management, particularly within large companies. This move to “in-house” services, however, is fueling a broader evolution in building a more creative and media-fluent service to the overall business.

As content marketers, it’s not enough to just understand how to create blogs, infographics, or other media assets. We need to understand how content operations work at scale. That means understanding technology, governance, and how to structure content so that it can be reused, repackaged, and leveraged across silos.

It won’t be long before your business starts looking hard at how to make content more efficient—and measurable at scale. Content marketers that have skill sets and knowledge beyond just creating powerful content will be ready to evolve and lead that charge.

Get Your Audience Data Plan Together

Privacy and the availability of customer data is going to become an incredibly hot topic very shortly. As we saw from this year’s research, “credibility and trust” is a huge goal for content marketing now. Indeed, the percentage of content marketers citing it as a goal has increased 19% in the last three years (see Page 35).

If you’re looking for measurability, there will be no other foundational element as important as connecting your content marketing experiences and being able to have a 360-degree view into the audience you are engaging. This includes, of course, the data that customers willingly, trustingly, and emotionally give to you as part of that program. This is what Forrester calls “Zero Party Data.” We just call it building an audience.
The 11th Annual B2B Content Marketing Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends report was produced by Content Marketing Institute (CMI) and MarketingProfs and sponsored by ON24.

The online survey, from which the results of this report were generated, was emailed to a sample of marketers using lists from CMI and MarketingProfs.

A total of 1,707 recipients from around the globe—representing a full range of industries, functional areas, and company sizes—replied to the survey during July 2020.

This report presents the findings from 740 respondents based in North America. These respondents indicated:

- Their organization is a for-profit company, primarily selling products/services to businesses (B2B).
- Their organization has used content marketing for at least one year.
- They are a content marketer, involved with the content marketing function, and/or someone to whom content marketing reports.

Note: This report contains comparisons with findings from last year’s 10th annual survey—reported on in B2B Content Marketing 2020: Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends, North America—in instances where we observed notable year-over-year differences.
