SURVEY TERM DEFINITIONS

Content marketing: A strategic marketing approach focused on creating and distributing valuable, relevant, and consistent content to attract and retain a clearly defined audience—and, ultimately, to drive profitable customer action.

Success: Achieving your organization’s desired/targeted results.

Note: In instances where we observed notable year-over-year differences, this report contains comparisons with findings from last year’s 10th annual survey—reported on in B2C Content Marketing 2020: Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends.
Welcome to our annual B2C Content Marketing Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends report. Here we present the results from B2C marketers who replied to our 11th Annual Content Marketing Survey.

The events of 2020 have certainly reshaped how organizations conduct their marketing. At the time of this survey, content marketers were still reeling from the events that took place during the first half of 2020. As we usher in 2021, we are still facing constant change and uncertainty.

Many B2C marketers reported adjusting quickly when the pandemic hit; perhaps their companies were doubling down on digital, heavily engaging in virtual events, or trying to keep on top of rapidly changing analytics resulting from more people being at home and online. All these scenarios created the need for new content, formats, and strategies.

As we move into 2021 in a world where most gatherings are still limited, direct-to-consumer will continue to drive B2C. Successful B2C marketers will focus on creating content experiences and building relationships in the digital world.
B2C content marketers are becoming more strategic.

Seventy-three percent of respondents report their organization has a content marketing strategy. Of those, 42% have a documented strategy, up from 33% the previous year. See page 7.

They responded quickly when the pandemic hit.

Eighty-two percent agree their organization made quick changes due to the pandemic. The top reported adjustment was “changed our targeting/messaging strategy” (63%). See pages 8 and 9.

Many have small content marketing teams.

Consistent with our past research, 52% report their organization has a small (or one-person) marketing/content marketing team serving the entire organization. See page 13.

Livestreaming video saw a big jump in use.

When we looked at the content types B2C marketers are using compared with one year ago, livestreaming video had the biggest increase (35% vs. 13% the previous year). See page 20.

Nearly half have established online communities.

Forty-eight percent say their organization has established an online community. The survey defined an online community as a space where your audience can engage with each other and your brand in the form of discussions, posts, surveys, etc. See page 21.

Facebook is the top social media platform.

Facebook is the social media platform that B2C marketers use most often (both organic and paid). That was also the case last year. The use of organic Instagram and YouTube increased over last year, by seven and 10 percentage points, respectively. See pages 23 and 25.

Stop Waiting For The New Normal—We’re Already In It
Welcome to 2021. You know, we spent so much time in 2020 struggling for an answer to “what now,” that it seemed impossible to plan for 2021. And now we’re all wondering if 2021 is simply a replay of last year.

What can we do, then? We often mistakenly believe that “what now” means we should take the experiences we had in 2020 and try to predict the new normal future. Will it be summer when we get back to normal? Will the vaccines help? Will the economy improve? We often plan our “what now” road map based on an assumption that our previous experience helps us to see around corners.

Spoiler alert: No one really knows what will happen.

What we do know is that as B2C marketers, developing direct relationships with consumers will increasingly depend on great digital experiences. So, we can start planning with a self-assessment of our content marketing plan. Remember that answering “what now” is not trying to plan for “what’s next.” Look at all the things that evolved this past year. What things do you want to keep? What do you want to change? What should you and your team stop doing? Then, with those things in mind, ask yourself how you and your team might change to prepare for whatever comes next.

Content Marketing Is Cool—But Content Operations Make It Work
As 2021 begins, we’re seeing more B2C businesses begin to in-source many elements of content creation, production, and management, particularly within large companies.

This move to “in-house” services, however, is fueling a broader evolution in building a more creative and media-fluent service to the overall business.

As content marketers, it’s not enough to just understand how to create blogs, infographics, or other media assets.

We need to understand how content operations work at scale. That means understanding technology, governance, and how to structure content so that it can be reused, repackaged, and leveraged across silos.

It won’t be long before your business starts looking hard at how to make content more efficient—and measurable at scale. Content marketers that have skill sets and knowledge beyond just creating powerful content will be ready to evolve and lead that charge.

Get Your Audience Data Plan Together

Customer data is going to become an increasingly precious commodity. As we saw from this year’s research, “building credibility and trust” is a huge goal for content marketing now. You’ll need the data in order to know where and how to be trustworthy. But you’ll need to be trustworthy in order to get the data. If that sounds like a Catch-22, it is. But delivering value to audiences before they become customers is the way out of it.

If you’re looking for measurability, there will be no other foundational element as important as connecting your content marketing experiences and being able to have a 360-degree view into the audience you are engaging. This includes, of course, the data that customers willingly, trustingly, and emotionally give to you as part of that program. This is what Forrester calls “Zero Party Data.” We just call it building an audience.
This report is based on the results of the Content Marketing Institute/MarketingProfs 11th Annual Content Marketing Survey. The online survey was emailed to a sample of marketers using lists from CMI and MarketingProfs. A total of 1,707 recipients from around the globe—representing a range of industries, functional areas, and company sizes—replied to the survey in July 2020. This report presents the findings from the 233 respondents who indicated:

- Their organization is a for-profit B2C company, with the majority (66%) based in North America.
- Their organization has used content marketing for at least one year.
- They are a content marketer, involved with the content marketing function, and/or someone to whom content marketing reports.

Note: In instances where we observed notable year-over-year differences, this report contains comparisons with findings from last year’s 10th annual survey—reported on in B2C Content Marketing 2020: Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends. Some percentages shown in this report do not total 100%, due to rounding.
