Welcome to the B2C Content Marketing Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends: Insights for 2022 report. This report looks back on the last 12 months and includes expectations for 2022.

Our research suggested that, due to work-from-home requirements, content marketing piqued the interest of many who were previously unaware of its power. With more people than ever spending time online, content marketing presented a prime opportunity for businesses to get and stay in front of audiences. Some B2C marketers discovered new audiences altogether.

Short articles and videos were big over the last 12 months with the B2C marketers we surveyed. In addition, expect a lot of B2C investment in video in 2022: 72% forecast investment in this area. Paid media came in a distant second.

Although most B2C marketers reported success with content marketing in the last 12 months, there are still challenges. Respondents said their top two content marketing challenges were creating content that appeals to multi-level roles within the target audience (42%) and internal communication between teams/silos (41%).

If B2C marketers can overcome these challenges, they’ll improve their odds of achieving greater content marketing success in 2022.

Here’s to a prosperous year!
KEY FINDINGS

Most B2C marketers are feeling successful with content marketing.
More than one out of four (26%) B2C respondents said their organization was extremely or very successful in the last 12 months. Another 55% said they were moderately successful. The top factor contributing to that success was “the value our content provides” (61%). See page 8.

B2C marketers were asked to do more with the same resources in the last 12 months.
66% of respondents said they were asked to do more with the same resources in the last 12 months. Most (53%) have small teams serving the entire organization. See pages 7 and 10.

80% of those who use paid distribution use paid social media advertising.
Among the B2C marketers who used paid content distribution channels, 43% said their organization increased spending on paid distribution in the last 12 months; 80% used social media advertising/promoted posts. See page 22.

61% expect their 2022 content marketing budget to be higher than their 2021 budget.
61% of respondents who are familiar with their company’s content marketing budget expected their 2022 content marketing budget to exceed their 2021 budget. See page 30.

Content creation for multi-level roles and internal communication are top challenges.
Respondents said their top two content marketing challenges were creating content that appeals to multi-level roles within the target audience (42%) and internal communication between teams/silos (41%). See page 33.

Video is the top predicted area of content marketing investment for 2022.
The top three types of content created in the last 12 months were short articles/posts (83%), videos (61%), and infographics/charts (51%). 72% expect their organization to invest in video in 2022. See pages 16 and 35.

Changes to algorithms and data management/analytics are top-of-mind issues in 2021/2022.
Changes to SEO/search algorithms (64%), changes to social media algorithms (53%), and data management/analytics (48%) are among top concerns for B2C marketers in 2021/2022. See page 34.

CLOSING THOUGHTS

ACTION STEPS

By Robert Rose, Chief Strategy Advisor, CMI

Our research points to transformational shifts to make content marketing an ever more important part of the integrated marketing mix. But what can go unnoticed are the dangers that lurk when we’re so close. There’s a wonderful scene in the movie “Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade” when the rich investor, Walter Donovan, is trying to convince Indy to go after the Holy Grail. He says, “We’re on the verge of completing a quest that began almost 2,000 years ago. We’re just one step away.” Indy responds, “That’s usually when the ground falls out from underneath your feet.”

In business today, everyone creates content — from the web team to the marketing automation/demand gen executives, even front-line account representatives. It’s probably easier to count who DOESN’T create content-driven experiences for customers these days.

But we must realize that this explosive trend is our quest. Our attempts to complete it require us to develop not just great content, but an operational strategy that supports all content. Without a strategy, an inconsistent voice and inability to measure success make our failure imminent.

But don’t overcorrect and let the ground fall out from underneath you. When businesses create a content strategy, there is a tendency to limit the production of content and remove the voices of all front-line managers. We centralize the storytelling function, and not only centralize the creation of the voice but the expression of it as well. What happens? Increasingly we see companies creating much more consistent and customer-centric sets of content. They get their voice and story back. But unfortunately, they remove their best storytellers — the rest of the business — from telling it. And as a friend of mine who was cut from a huge Hollywood movie once told me, “It’s hard to be excited about a story that you were removed from telling.”

My advice?

A scalable, successful, and differentiating content marketing strategy will help you more easily create, manage, activate, and measure digital content. You will define success by how well the content marketing strategy empowers everybody on the front lines (sales, account reps, executives, and even accounting and legal) to tell your stories — and the best “next stories” — to your audience.

A strategic content marketing operation isn’t the storyteller of the business. It enables everyone else to be the storytellers.

Remember: It’s your story — don’t forget that you need everyone to tell it well.
The 12th Annual B2C Content Marketing Benchmarks, Budgets, and Trends: Insights for 2022 report was produced by Content Marketing Institute (CMI) and MarketingProfs. The results are from CMI/MarketingProfs 12th Annual Content Marketing Survey. The online survey was emailed to a sample of marketers using lists from CMI and MarketingProfs.

A total of 1,275 recipients from around the globe — representing a range of industries, functional areas, and company sizes — replied to the survey during July 2021.

This report presents the findings from the 337 marketers who indicated that their company is either B2C or B2B+B2C and that they are a content marketer, involved with the content marketing function, and/or someone to whom content marketing reports. Most of the respondents are based in North America.

Note: Use caution when comparing this report’s findings to past years, as our methodology changed slightly. For the last several years, one of our qualifying criteria was that the respondent’s company had used content marketing for at least one year. This year, we enabled respondents whose companies have not been using content marketing for at least one year to complete the survey.

We operate major branded events in Marketing, Global Finance, Life Sciences and Pharma, Construction and Real Estate, and in a number of other specialist markets and connect communities online year-round.

About MarketingProfs
MarketingProfs has been fueling the success of marketers at some of the world’s most iconic brands since 2000—first through webinars, newsletters, and other content; then world-class training; and best-in-class consulting services.

The products and delivery have evolved, yet throughout we have been laser-focused on helping marketers and their teams set priorities, solve problems, and fuel business growth.

We focus also on something equally important: Helping marketers do work they’re proud of.

Learn why 700,000+ marketers rely on MarketingProfs as their partner in Marketing. Our clients speak for themselves. Find out how we can help you at MarketingProfs.com.
